THE EVENING WORLD has a larger circulation than any Evening paper printed in English and is not afraid to publish its figures or open its books to the public.

THE SUNDAY WORLD to-morrow will be " corker." It will contain more matter than an ordinary two-dollar book, and besides covering the news of the earth will give a large amount and spicy variety of entertaining reading. BILL Nye's touching tale or "May-Day Moving" will strike as many responsive chords as can be awakened on a " harp of a thousand strings."

DEATH'S ANGLING.

The highest merits of a cartoon are its truthfulness and timeliness. How truthful and pat was THE WORLD's striking cartoon picturing Death angling for his victims from a telegraph pole, with an electric wire in his bony hand, was again proved by the instantaneous killing of a young German on the Bowery last night.

It would seem that everybody ought to know enough not to touch voluntarily and needlessly, as this young man did, the deathdealing wires. But every day brings its proof that this knowledge and caution are very far from universal.

An electric light company ought to be made to suffer for placing lamps within reach of persons on the street. Are the wires never to go underground?

OIL AND WATER.

The capital of the Standard Off Transis $95,000,000, according to Secretary FLAGLER and the market value of the stock, $50,000,

This is a refutation of the maxim that "oil and water won't mix." Not one-half of this $140,000,000 represents money actually expended or invested in the business.

The average earnings upon this enormous capitalization, according to Mr. FLAGLER, have been 13 per cent. And yet the corporation organs cite the relatively low price of oil as a sufficient justification of this gigantic

The people don't see it in that light.

DEPEW SEES THE BARS.

CHAUNCEY DEPEW, one of the cleverest as well as the most amiable and eloquent of Americans, evidently doesn't take much stock in the attempt to boom him for the Presidency.

h In his speech at the Grant Birthday banquet last night Mr. DEPEW mentioned it as a notable fact that " though we are the only purely industrial nation in the world, we have never selected a President from among the great business men of the country." Andthen he added the significant remark that "the conditions and prejudices of success present insuperable obstacles to such a choice."

Well, there are prejudices against elevating railroad Presidents to the White House, and DEPEW is too smart not to know it.

BRAINS PLAY BALL.

It takes something besides muscle, wind and pluck to play baseball nowadays.

As in war it is the "thinking bayonet that wins, other things being anywhere near equal, so in the American game it is generally brains that succeed.

The truth of this was illustrated in the snatching of a victory by strategy-a quick, bold conception swiftly and intelligently carried out-by Ewing in yesterday's game with the Philadelphias.

When quick wit supplements good physical qualities and perfect technique, then is "great ball" played.

The accident on the Brooklyn Bridge yes terday, due to a conductor's carelessness, serves to emphasize the fact of the remarkable safety of its system and management. The transportation of 90,000,000 people with no fatal accident heretofore shows that riding over the bridge is safer than walking the streets.

OR, OF MERIT.

Assistant Chief of Fire Department. (Concluded.)

WRITTEN EXPRESSLY FOR THE EVENING WORLD. HE crowd watched the whole proceeding with breathless interest and the greatest enthusi asm. It was a dangerous thing to attempt. If he were to slip from the hands of the men who held him by the heels he would cer tainly spatter the side-

There was nothing we could hold under him, because the men had taken the cover from the patrol wagon and tried to spread it under the window, thinking the man would jump, and a coal box had prevented their holding it so it would do much good as a jumping blanket. Consequently nothing could be done to prevent Clayton, if he were to be dropped, from striking the sidewalk.

He got a good grip of the man under the arms and hollered to the men to pull them back. It was quite a strain on them to hold the dead weight of two men for two or three minutes even. Fortunately no more time was required than that. The interest of the spectators increased as they saw the men in the window holding on to Clayton for all they were worth, and Clayton keeping a firm grip on his man.

Fortunately no accident occurred. The man in the nightgown was helped into the window, and then they pulled in Clayton. He was not hurt and suffered no worse harm than getting very red in the face from being held head downward. He breathed a little quick from the strain it had been to hold the man whom he had rescued. He came downstairs with him, and brought him over to me. "Here he is!" he said triumphantly, but in a quiet tone of voice. The crowd of bystanders applauded his feat, and showed a generous admiration for his pluck. But Luke Clayton was a modest man who had done the thing simply from a sense of duty.

THEY TRIED TO GET THEM TO GO DOWN. It was one of the best rescues I have ever seen, I think, and the element of personal risk was very great. This, of course, always enhances any deed like this, and the amount of danger undergone is really more to the credit of the person who incurs it than is the number of persons he may rescue.

What had surprised me most was to see the quick way in which Clayton had taken in the situation and set about his scheme for res ing the endangered man. He was such a quiet, unassuming fellow. Everybody thought he would get the Bennett medal for his rescue. But it was awarded to a fireman who had got three or four people out of a big fire. Clayton did not fail to secure recognition for his work, however.

He belonged to Farnham Post of the G. A. R. When they heard about what he had done, as he did not get the official annual medal which the department confers for merit of this distinguished kind, they got him up a medal themselves commemorating the event. It was a handsome medal of gold, and Clayton wears it now with no little satisfaction. It is doubly valued, inasmuch as it shows an appreciation of his courageous exploit, and is, moreover, the spontaneous tribute from friends and comrades.

This is a more satisfactory recognition of one's services than is always obtained. At a fire on this same street the heat had driven four women back to their room on the fourth floor. They were huddled together, cowering with fright, in the room.

The fire had been pretty well quenched but the top of the house was charged with a good deal of smoke and steam. The firemen in looking around in the ruins to see if there was any one left in them, found the quarter almost insensible with fear.

They tried to get them to go down. But whether they thought the place below was on fire or what was in the'r minds, they re-fused to go down. So the firemen made them take hold of hands, and then one pulled in front and two or three pushed behind, and in this way the women were brought safely down to the street.

One would have supposed they would have felt grateful for being helped out of the smoky place. They didn't, or at least if they did, their gratitude did not prevent them from wanting to lodge a complaint against the firemen for rough usage!

Because they were so foolish as to want to stick in their room in the burning house, and wade it impossible to rescent them without made it impossible to rescue them without some little force, the firemen were to be called to account for the way they had saved called to account for the way they had say them! This was consoling to the firemen. Things are, of course, much more systema-tized than they were in the old days. I remember at a large fire in Centre street at a factory a number of lives were lost. The bodies were lying amid the debris of the fire. The Fire Department contended that it was the part of the Department of Buildings to look after the bodies, while the Department of Buildings maintained that this belonged to the Fire Department.

the Fire Department.

As they couldn't settle the point the bodies remained there for two days unattended to. Finally the citizens got aroused about the matter and got up a subscription list to defray the expenses of having the bodies dug ou and interred.

and interred.

At that time there was no law on this point.

Now there is one which bids the Fire Department to notify the Building Department when their duties are finished to look after such matters as this.

The Great Crowd Collected in Grand Street by an "Evening World" Advertisement. The business man who advertises—and the dealer business man—is alert to the spirit of the times, and there is a strong tendency to the starting in announcements, fitting to that spirit. On Thursday B. Stern & Son, the manufacturing clothiers at 456 and 460 Grand street, as nounced in Ting Evening World that they would sell next day, from 2 to 5 r. M., knee trousers for youngsters at him cents per pair.

An EVENING WORLD reporter visited the locality seaterday atternoos. He found a big policeman vainly endeavoring to satisfy a big crowd of men and women, each plutching from one to three boys, that the doof of Stern's store was locked.

Inside the store a similar crowd completely filled boys, that the doof of Stern's store was locked.

Inside the store a similar crowd completely filled the salesroom. Half a dozen cierks were busily dealing out trousers from a pile of 3,000 fresh from the tailor shop in Delancey street. The trousers have been sold heretofore at 39 cents. The buyers were mainly from the poorer families of this neighborhood, and some of the little fellows were in and need of the new clothes. Thanks to the plan indicated above of admitting only as many at a time as could be comfortably accommodated, there was no trampling of children under foot, and while all were not served when 5 o'clock arrived, much good was done by the scheme.

The younger Mr. Stern says that The Evening World yields by far the best harvest to the advertiser in comparison with its contemporaries.

Names of Children Who Stand Highest in Their Classes.

This Week's Record of Primary School Pupils.

Boys and Girls Who Have Gained the Maximum Number of Marks Once More Reap the Reward of Industry-A Long List of Names of Pupils Who Have Been Punctuni, Bright, Diligent and Well-Behaved.

The pupils in the primary schools and de-partments who, during the past week, nave stood foremost in their classes once more find their names in THE EVENING WORLD'S Roll of Merit. Their teachers, who are impartial judges, have supplied us with the names from the official records.

The efforts of these little scholars are recognized, and it is hoped they will continue to strive for pre-eminence.

Names not arriving in time for to-day's ssue will be published in the issue immediately following their receipt.

Not Much Moving Thus Far. Inquiry at several real estate offices yesterday elicited the information that fewer people has changed their places of residence this spring in New York than during any moving season for New York than during any moving sea many years. This is attributed to the un cold and disagreeable weather.

The Best Nutritive Tonic mpaired Digestion, Malnutrition, in Course lescence, Pulmonary and Throat A SOVEREIGN REMEDY For the Weak and Debilitated. Indorsed by all Physicians, Throughout the Civilized World.

Prof. Pietra Santa, of Paris, the world-renowned specials to n pulmonary disease, in his work published in Paris, speaks of the JOHARS HOFF S MALT EXTRACT as follows:

"I can highly recommend this pleasant remody is restoring weakened digestion. As a large number of patients tack the necessary power to digest solid food, and would, through the use of stimulants, but makes and weakened, therefore I regard to the practitioner to regard to the present to the practitioner to DHANN HOFF'S MALF EXTRACT, which will not not only as a topic but as a noticent as well, and which is less exciting than wises a simulant." HOFF S MALT EXTRACT as follows:
